

Klaus-Peter Fett

Chief Information and Digital Officer (CIDO) Röchling Group

From 1990 to 1993, Klaus-Peter Fett studied business and computer science at the Duale Hochschule (Cooperative State University) of Baden-Württemberg in Stuttgart. Between 1993 and 2004, he worked at IBM in various roles, most recently at IBM Software Group EMEA as Director of Software Sales for a German industrial client. Fett switched to the software company Mercury Interactive Germany GmbH as Financial Services Strategic Account Manager in 2005. The company was acquired by Hewlett-Packard Deutschland GmbH (HP) in 2006. In 2010, Fett joined Google Germany GmbH. There, he was first primarily responsible for advising and supporting companies from the manufacturing industry headquartered in Germany in the use of cloud technologies as a basis for digital transformation. Later, in 2016, Fett took on the role of Head of Innovation and Collaboration for the Germany, Austria and Switzerland region. Most recently, he was likewise responsible for German industrial clients as Industry Leader for Google Cloud.

In October 2018, Fett came to the Röchling Group as its new Chief Information and Digital Officer and since then has been a member of the Röchling Management Board.
